

COMMUNICATION SKILL - Session 4

GIVING AND ACCEPTING A COMPLIMENT

Accepting Compliment

Here are some tips for accepting a compliment gracefully

Express gratitude

A simple "thank you" or "thank you, I appreciate your kind words" is a polite way to show your appreciation for the other person's remarks. You can also try saying "thank you, that's very kind of you".

Be humble

Accepting a compliment can help you develop humility and avoid coming off as vain, bashful, or prideful.

Don't deflect or downplay

Avoid saying "oh, it was nothing" or "I had nothing to do with it". This can diminish your accomplishments and make you seem unconfident.

Giving Compliment

Here are some tips for giving a compliment gracefully

Be specific

Avoid leaving the person with questions by being clear about what you're complimenting. For example, instead of saying "That was amazing," you could say "I am proud of you" and then specify what they did to be proud of.

Be humble and graceful

Be graceful while giving a compliment. Have an eye contact and smile while giving compliment.

Activity

- Step 1 Give a small chart paper to all students and ask them to write their name on the top.
- Step 2 Ask them to write a quality (positive only) which suits them the best.
- Step 3 Ask them to pass on the card to the next person.
- Step 4 Ask the next person to write a quality of the person whose name is written at the top
- Step 5 Ask them to pass on again to the next person and so on until everyone gets back their card.
- Step 6 Ask them to read out what others feel about themselves.

Every one gets a badge with their adjective and name as mentioned by the in the previous class.
