

EFFECTIVE STUDY SKILLS - Session 7 and 8

Revision techniques

Make a revision schedule

Planning by allocating sufficient time for revision is necessary to avoid last-minute cramming. While planning, prepare a revision schedule. Allocate sufficient time for each subject. While making a schedule, don't forget to give yourself time for rest. Prepare only achievable goals in the schedule

Practising past paper

Practising past question papers is an important revision strategy. It gives you a great understanding of the exam pattern and question types and gives you a chance to practice writing. It gives you a comprehensive idea about how well you can articulate the learned topics in a specific time constraint. It gives you a chance to identify your weaker areas and improve them.

Use different learning resources

Confining to the textbooks alone might be less interesting. Seek the help of videos, articles, podcasts, and animation for a better understanding. Make charts to recollect and paste them on walls, Stand and just glance while brushing, combing hair or while passing by. This will enhance sub conscious memory and help in retention.

How to stay calm and stress free

Easing Your Mind

Practice positive self-talk.

When you feel a thought like that coming on, replace it with a positive one like “I know there are a lot of questions here, but if I take them one-by-one, I know I can make it through.”

Don’t fixate on what others are doing.

If you feel the need to take your eyes off the test for a moment, just close them and breathe deeply a few times.

Don’t look at what others are doing and worry or get stressed. Every individual is different with different capabilities.

Laugh a little

For some children, humor can ease tension and keep you motivated. Watch a comedy movie or have some funny moments with family members.

Relaxing Your Body

Wear layers of comfortable clothing

That way, you’ll be able to adjust to the testing environment. Wearing a hoodie over a t-shirt can keep you from getting cold, for instance. And if it gets too hot, just unzip the hoodie. These little tricks let you focus on the test rather than worry about physical discomfort.

Take deep breaths

Close your eyes.

Take a slow, deep breath, inhaling through your nose.

Exhale slowly through your mouth, and repeat.

Open your eyes and get back to the test, recharged!

Exercise regularly

Make sure you exercise regularly

Activity
